

CHILD PROTECTION OFFICER - ABINGDON SQUASH CLUB

Safeguarding and protecting children is most effective when it happens at grassroots. The ASC Child Protection Officer provides a vital link between the strategies and guidance at national level and the action and delivery at local level. The club treats safeguarding children as a vital part of the delivery of a safe, enjoyable and healthy sport and where parents and players will take child safety as of paramount importance. The CPO will help to co-ordinate and advise in this area of their club's activities, with the support and backing of the Committee and Coaches. The Club CPO can also help to make sure that problems are dealt with quickly and effectively. That's why we have appointed a CPO.

Who is suitable to be a CPO? There are no formal requirements or qualifications; but it should be a volunteer with relevant background (e.g. social worker, health visitor, teacher or parent). The CPO should not be a coach or committee member and should attend an online safeguarding workshop offered by England Squash or similar body. The CPO will need to attend Club Committee meetings when needed to explore key matters and work with the chairman or delegated officer if the need arises.

Skills and qualities of a CPO

- Must be child-focussed, and able to think about things from the perspective of a junior.
- Must communicate well with both adults and children.
- Must have administration and recording skills.
- Should be able to promote and advocate for good practice and safeguarding within the club.

Core tasks of a CPO
